ON THE COVER

Thanks to interested parents of students, the College has received $2,500 from Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., for "unrestricted use." The check was presented by J. Paul H. Hively (left), vice-chairman of Dajumo (the parents organization), Williamsport, Pa., to President Calvert N. Ellis. J. H. Shreiner (center) of Lansdale, Pa., is Dajumo chairman.

*Foundations, Industry Lend Support To Juniata's Development Program;
NSF Summer Institute Is Arranged*

CROSS-CUTTING THE CAMPUS

FOUNDATION and industry money to support the program of the College is aiding a "decade of development" which had its beginning without fanfare last year.

The National Science Foundation has awarded $40,200 to Juniata to conduct a Summer Institute for high school chemistry teachers. Additional funds have come from the Atomic Energy Commission "to introduce nuclear technology to students in the life sciences."

The Danforth Foundation has approved a grant to aid three instructors in preparing for the new freshman course "Great Epochs of World Culture." Grants from the Du Pont Company and the Esso Foundation were received again this year.

Then, too, Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., presented an unrestricted gift, thanks to the efforts of the parents association.

Summer Institute

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE from the National Science Foundation will enable the College to conduct a six-week institute in "chemical equilibrium" beginning July 10, 1961.

Designed primarily "to improve the subject-matter competence of participating teachers," the Summer Institute will be directed by Dr. David M. Hercules '54. A staff of four full-time professors and several visiting specialists of national reputation will participate.

Juniata College was one of 22 selected to have an Institute for high school teachers of chemistry and was awarded a grant of $40,200. The NSF created its summer program in recognition "of the important role of high school and college teachers in developing our scientific manpower potential."

Applications for the Summer Institute (July 10 to August 19) were made available by Dr. Hercules in late December.

malian Physiology, Chemical Equilibrium, Inorganic Chemistry, and Biochemistry.

Members of the faculty who will direct the use of the equipment are Dr. John R. Comerford '50, associate professor of biology, Dr. Eva Hartzler '38,

The checks that are being handed to President Calvert N. Ellis (left) are $5,000 for a science building and $2,000 for the college's operating fund which Esso Education Foundation made recently. C. A. Jones, Johnstown, assistant district manager for Esso Standard Oil Co., presented the money at the college.

Funds From AEC

THE ATOMIC ENERGY Commission has awarded a grant of $12,000 to the College to obtain equipment which will serve "to introduce nuclear technology to students in the life sciences."

The funds will be used by the Departments of Biology and Chemistry to acquire equipment which is needed to present "more adequate and meaningful laboratory work" in five courses: Cellular Physiology, Mamprofessor of chemistry, and Dr. David M. Hercules '54, associate professor of chemistry.

Esso Contributes

A CAPITAL GRANT of $5,000 for the proposed science building and an unrestricted grant of $2,000 was made to the College in December by the Esso Education Foundation. Juniata was one of only three colleges in Pennsylvania to receive capital grants. (Others were Duquesne and Lehigh).

However, Pennsylvania colleges and universities shared 35 grants, most of which were unrestricted (like the $2,000 to Juniata), to assist "privately supported higher education." The grants, which went to 25 schools, were among 374 throughout the nation totaling $1,609,695.

Grant From Du Pont

THE COLLEGE also was awarded a grant of $4,000 in the Du Pont Company's annual program of aid to education "to help maintain the excellence of its teaching," particularly in scientific fields.

Fourteen Pennsylvania colleges, mostly liberal arts colleges, including Juniata, will share the grants this year. As in the past, the colleges were chosen on their records of strength in chemical education.

Each of the grants consists of $2,500 for chemistry teaching and $1,500 for other courses. The funds for chemistry teaching are to be used by the institution "to most effectively advance their instruction of the subject and to stimulate interest in it."

Parents Aid Program

AN UNRESTRICTED cash gift of $2,500 from Sylvania Electric Products, Inc.,

was presented to President Ellis during the annual Parents Day program in November.

J. Paul H. Hively, vice president of Lowry Electric Company, Inc., Williamsport, turned over the check which represented the first major gift from an industrial foundation obtained through Dajumo (the parents organization). Mr. Hively is vice-chairman of the group.

More than 1,050 parents and guests participated in the Parents Day activities on the campus. Many of them heard President Ellis talk about "the state of the college" and learned about the "increased interest on the part of parents in the ongoing of the college." J. H. Shreiner, Lansdale, Pa., chairman of Dajumo, presided.

Hit Show for Parents

THE STUDENTS "came through" for the parents again this year with an all-college musical performance of "Wonderful Town" that was hailed as a "triumph" by reviewers.

The show, directed by Bruce Spencer with specialized assistance from Mrs. Alice Blaisdell, Professors Robert Currier and William Merrel, was described as having "pace, wit and that electric something that constitutes a hit."

Yoder Papers

A COLLECTION of "invaluable" historical materials of the late Joseph W. Yoder, author, lecturer and interpreter of the "plain people," has been given to the College by his widow, Emily Lane Yoder.

The papers, which have been transferred to the Carnegie Library at the college, include "priceless background" on the Amish.

Original manuscripts of Mr. Yoder's books about the Amish and their traditions, his scores of lectures and much of the music which he used in his wide travels are among the materials, according to Mrs. Yoder.

In addition, the collection contains photographs of Mr. Yoder's activity during his student days at Juniata where he was a member of the college's first "varsity quartet" and its first debate team. He also is recognized as the first appointed athletic director of Juniata serving from 1901 to 1904 while completing his college course.

Mr. Yoder was a "high school visitor" for Juniata for 20 years during which time he spoke and sang to school assemblies and was "most influential" in bringing students to the college.

An active executive committee has been making the parents organization, known as Dajumo, function effectively for Juniata. Grouped at its fall meeting, left to right: Gerald Buzzard, Curwensville; Bernard Mattheiss, secretary, Baltimore, Md.; J. H.

Shreiner, president, Lansdale; J. Paul H. Hively, vice-president, Williamsport; Dr. Joseph Lacue, Gallitzin; Richard T. Williamson, Wyomissing; George Savage, past president, Collingswood, N. J.

President Ellis and C. H. Leshner, chairman of the board of trustees, were key participants in the placing of the plaque on Maude Leshner Hall at Parents Day.

Leshner Hall

THE NEWEST residence hall for women was formally named Maude Leshner Hall, in honor of the late wife of the chairman of the Board of Trustees, on Parents Day (Nov. 12).

A plaque was unveiled at the building, which has been called East Hall since its construction in 1957.

President Ellis said that the action by the Board in approving the name in honor of the late Mrs. C. H. Leshner is "a tribute not only to Mrs. Leshner and her interest in Juniata College, but a recognition of the large part which the chairman of our Board has had in the ongoing of Juniata."

Mrs. Leshner, a graduate of the Business course of Juniata in 1905, died April 20, 1957.

Where From?

HUNTINGTON, Blair and Allegheny counties rank one-two-three among the 47 counties in Pennsylvania represented in the annual geographical distribution of enrollment at the College. Huntingdon leads with 67 of the 770 full-time students. Others in the first ten are Blair, 64; Allegheny, 59; Cambria, 38; Montgomery, 35; Somerset, 34; Chester, 26; Bucks, 22; Dauphin, 22 and Franklin, 21.

Pennsylvania has 78.9 percent of the enrollment and New Jersey has 10.9

percent. Eighteen states and India are represented.

Helpful Spirit

STUDENTS got into the swing of community service during the past Christmas season.

A Juniata Christian Association "project" committee of 11, headed by Harry L. Knisely, Jr. '63, Chambersburg, spent a Saturday afternoon painting the interior of the Mt. Olive Baptist Church, Cherry Lane, Huntingdon. The JCA also held its annual Christmas party for the underprivileged children of the community.

As another indication of helpfulness, students contributed $69.25 for three children whose four younger step-brothers and sisters perished in a tragic fire in Huntingdon December 2. The money was turned over to the Salvation Army.

Student Elections

TWELVE STUDENTS have been selected for the honor service club, Tau Epsilon Sigma. Membership is based on academic achievement (2.50 average) and participation in extra-curricular activities. Those named were: Doris K. Benna, Alum Bank; Cynthia A. Bowden, Mountain Lakes, N. J.; Ronald B. Clippinger, Carlisle; Martha S. Good, Hollidaysburg; Harold C.

Grimm, Uniontown; Jon P. Groff, Perkasie; Kay Haviland, Radnor; W. Jeanne Mock, Roaring Spring; H. Melinda Mumma, Manheim; Doris A. Reed, Temple; Phyllis E. Sholly, Pennsauken, N. J.; and Donna J. Zwick, Stoystown.

Robert W. Fulks, Jr., York, was elected president of the freshman class in November. Other officers elected were: Donald L. Detwiler, Roaring Spring, vice-president; Emmy A. Nitel, New Providence, N. J., secretary; and J. Cameron Mauger, Chester, Pa., treasurer.

Kay Haviland's appointment as editor of The Juniatian, effective for the spring term, has been approved by the Publications Committee.

Choir Goes on Tour

THE COLLEGE CHOIR, a 40-member mixed voice group, opened its 29th season by giving 20 concerts in an 11-day tour of Western Pennsylvania and Ohio, Jan. 26 to Feb. 5.

The choir, under the direction of Prof. Donald S. Johnson, will present nearly 50 concerts in churches, high schools, and on television during the 1961 season.

After opening in Indiana high school, the choir appeared in the Plumcreek Church of the Brethren at Shelocta before moving into the Pittsburgh area. Other concerts were given at New Kensington, Laketon, Greensburg, Sharon, Pittsburgh, Beaver, Canton (Ohio), Glenshaw, Washington, Uniontown, Scottdale, Somerset, Salisbury, Meyersdale, Johnstown and Windber.

Appearances of the choir are scheduled throughout the winter and spring: Feb. 18, New Enterprise; Feb. 19, Roaring Spring, Hollidaysburg, Altoona; Feb. 23, WFBG-TV, Altoona, Tyrone; Mar. 4, Milroy; Mar. 5, Lewistown, Newport, Mifflintown; Mar. 9, Oller Hall; Mar. 12, Huntingdon.

Mar. 18, Mechanicsburg; Mar. 19, New Cumberland, Harrisburg, Burnham; Apr. 16, Carlisle; Apr. 17, Chambersburg, Waynesboro, Hagerstown; Apr. 20, Oller Hall; Apr. 29, Combined concert with Elizabethtown Choir in Oller Hall; May 6, Combined concert with Susquehanna University Choir at Selinsgrove; May 7, Williamsport, Lock Haven and Sunbury.

NEW PRESIDENT TO RELY ON SCHOLARS FROM COLLEGE CAMPUSES

By A. Robert Smith '50

Yvonne and Bob Smith '50 form a classy and competent team to cover political developments in the nation's capital, with special emphasis on events which affect readers in the Pacific Northwest. In this article, Bob takes a timely look at trends and developments on the Washington scene emerging since the arrival of our new president, John Kennedy.

IF PRESIDENT KENNEDY were a Juniata grad, instead of a Harvard man, his new administration would doubtlessly include Dr. Calvert Ellis (to solve the gold shortage problem), Dr. Morley Mays (to raise standards and improve ethics in government), Dr. Kenneth Crosby (to find the answer to Castro) and Dr. Homer Will (to get us to the moon).

The obvious cause of this speculation is the President's reliance upon scholars fresh from the campuses, notably from his alma mater. As the political professors of the Kennedy Administration succeeded the political businessmen of the Eisenhower Administration, the wisecrack here in the capital was that there is nothing left at Harvard but Radcliffe.

My bias in favor of men of education makes it easy to forecast that the new ascendancy of the professors in Washington will be exceedingly beneficial to the public interest, and to the troubled world which America must somehow lead toward peace. There are some skeptics who shake their heads over this development, perhaps mostly as a conditioned reflex as they cling to the notion that what we most need are realists and not visionaries. My own feeling is that the realists of today are the visionaries, the men of ideas.

President Kennedy did not start this movement of educational prowess to Washington. He is, indeed, something of a product of this movement himself, for this change has for some years been taking hold in the Senate whence came he to the Presidency. There the arm-waving, legendary Senator Claghorn, wearing a frock coat and a string tie, bleating demagogic nonsense at the ceiling has become an extinct species. Tiring of courthouse politicians, the voters have more and more reposed trust in young men of creative thought.

This is one reason why today the majority leader of the Senate, Mike Mansfield of Montana, is a former college professor of history, and the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, is a former college president. Men of education and ideas are advancing in number and power.

Two Reasons for Trend

This is a significant trend for two reasons. First, it will affect the character of American leadership over the long pull ahead. Second, it will affect the ideas which come from the new academically-trained Kennedy regime.

For the long pull, the changing character of the Senate is important for more than the traditional and constitutional reasons—the awesome authority which the Senate exercises in world affairs through its power to advise and consent on appointments of ambassadors, ratification of treaties and its daily power to goad or restrain the President by mobilizing public opinion. It is important now for a new reason.

The election of 1960 marked a turning point, as nearly as turning points can ever be marked, in our political history. In the past it was rare when a Senator moved on to become President. Brilliant Senators by the score from Daniel Webster to Robert A. Taft, seethed with this ambition. But in this past era, the nation more often looked to governors and to generals for presidential leadership.

Governors of powerful states, say New York, California and Pennsylvania, may again reach the White House, but only over the considerable handicap which world events—and America's accepted place in that world—have imposed upon future presidential aspirants. As one governor who sought a presidential nomination last year expressed his dilemma, "All I know about foreign affairs is what I read in the New York Times." Governors are more likely to become presidents by going first to the Senate.

Senate Proving Grounds

In 1960, Kennedy and Nixon, as well as Johnson and Lodge, were men who came to the fore in the Senate. The two presidential contenders projected themselves to the voters in terms of what they knew about international affairs and what they believed should be America's role in these affairs. The vice presidency, upgraded greatly by Eisenhower's use of Nixon for trips abroad, has become the other logical training ground for future presidents.

While President Kennedy is not an ex-professor, he is a scholarly product of the new senatorial training school for presidents. By profession, he is a politician in the best sense of the term. In building his administration, he has surrounded himself with some experienced politicians and some very new to politics from the universities. Here lies the crux of the matter: effective national leadership requires fresh ideas from creative, informed minds, but also the political skill needed to implement these ideas in a free society where the consent of Congress and the public must be secured.

In the decade now gone, America was led by an exceedingly popular general who felt called to this high duty but personally loathed much that is needful to the art of politics—the soft-soaping of a recalcitrant lieutenant at the capital, the intimidation of a dissident in the party ranks, the glad grappling with the political opposition over public issues. Because this was foreign to his experience, Eisenhower was handicapped as president.

Wilson, a former professor, was a man of ideas whose experience as governor of New Jersey gave him a measure of the political skill he required to advance them effectively. But his most sensational failure—the rejection by the Senate of his League of Nations proposal—was the failure of the president's political skill, not the weakness of his idea. Perhaps Wilson, with all the political savvy in the world, could not then have committed the United States to international involvement. For it was not really until the election of President Eisenhower over thirty years later that isolation vanished as a major issue in American politics.

For the past 10 years, A. Robert Smith '50 has had his own Washington news bureau for Pacific Northwest newspapers. Last year his wife, Yvonne, joined him as a reporter. Together they now cover political developments in Washington where they give special attention to those events which affect readers of their newspapers—particularly what their Senators and Congressmen are doing and saying.

One of the most interesting episodes in Bob's career as a Washington correspondent was in representing two Alaska newspapers which were crusading for Alaskan statehood. "There was quite a sense of accomplishment in the final outcome, after some years of falling short," Bob explains.

At the present time, Bob is writing a book on the Senate's most authentic maverick, Wayne Morse of Oregon. It is due for publication by Doubleday later this year. To gather information, Yvonne and Bob interviewed everybody from Harry Truman in Independence, Mo., to Morse's twin brothers in Wisconsin last summer.

A former editor of The Juniatian, Bob claims he feels like a veteran at 36 "with all the young men taking high positions in the Kennedy Administration." He has flown with President Kennedy on his private plane to Oregon and back. Last summer, Bob and Yvonne covered the Democratic National convention at Los Angeles and then went to Oregon to visit their editors.

PRESIDENT HOPES TO EXTEND CONCEPT OF PEACE CORPS

It is not my purpose to acclaim or belittle any of these presidents but to note that each has built upon the past, bringing changes with the evolutionary willingness of the country to accept them. If Wilson's League of Nations fell before the opposition of isolationist Senator Lodge, Roosevelt's United Nations rose upon the support of Senator Vandenburg, newly converted to internationalism.

If Roosevelt's New Deal brought far-reaching changes in the role of the lated, the economy will be stabilized, and a minimum welfare standard in health, education and wages will be set by the government. But nothing save the postal service is to be nationalized. This middle ground is still being ploughed, but the point here is that it is being accepted and ploughed by both parties.

Kennedy's New Frontier, then, leads inexorably to federal aid to education at all levels and to federally-backed hospitalization and medical insurance for the elderly as an extension of So-self-governed nations. He will be seeking means of advancing backward areas into the industrial age, of transmitting America's early zeal for democratic freedoms and human rights as well as its contemporary abhorrence of totalitarian imperialism. And he will seek a way toward reduction of armaments.

It is highly significant, it seems to me, that the idea which caused the most favorable response in the election campaign was Kennedy's proposal for a peace corps of college graduates to be dispersed into foreign lands to perform constructive services in areas where Christianity, democracy and even a modest living standard are largely unknown—areas into which Communism is most likely to spread.

Most Brethren and Quakers realize this is no new concept. Both denominations have written a moving chapter in the advance of America's Christian compassion in this field. Their volunteers were the torch bearers of an historic evolution in civilized conduct.

Bold, Creative Step

From these efforts this concept evolved seven years ago into a broader program supported by 14 Protestant denominations and the Catholics under International Volunteer Services, Inc., whose executive director is Dr. J. S. Noffsinger, for many years a trustee of Juniata. Since its inception under Eisenhower's people-to-people program, I. V. S. has sent out 200 college graduates into nine countries to dig wells, install power generators, clear jungles, sow vegetable and fiber crops, resettle refugees, start poultry farms and teach peasants how to maintain machinery. The young volunteers, age 22 and 23, served two-year periods at $60 per month plus living expenses. None were exempted from military service, but none were drafted upon their return.

Now President Kennedy wants to carry the concept further by building a corps of thousands of such young specialists. Is this being impractically visionary?

Since the days of Sparta, nation-states have called their young men to bear arms as a high national duty.

President Kennedy and Vice-President Lyndon Johnson.

federal government in domestic affairs, the Eisenhower Administration neither sought to repeal New Deal statutes nor abolish its agencies for regulation of business. Indeed, this recent Republican administration expanded the Federal Security Agency of the Truman era into a full-fledged Department of Health, Education and Welfare with a cabinet officer at its head.

What this means is that both parties, with the exception of Senator Goldwater, have reached a broad accord on what is mid-Century America's middle way between laissez faire and socialism. Business will be regulated. The only uncertainty is what precise terms these programs will carry, a matter for inter-party debate.

In Foreign Affairs

Where will the president lead us in foreign affairs? Here again he will build upon the past—upon the Marshall plan and Point Four established by Truman and expanded by Eisenhower to all parts of the world; upon the basic American military commitment to the UN to prevent aggression. He will doubtless seek sympathetic identification with the interests and aspirations of the emerging new

Would it not be a bold, creative step for the United States now to be the first nation to call its young men and young women to bear the implements and ideas of peace and freedom as a duty to God and all mankind?

It is one thing for a government to dispense aid, to assist other governments in planning and financing public improvements—highways, dams, housing, etc. This is usually done by older specialists who are reasonably well paid and want to enjoy “American comforts” wherever they happen to be, from Leopoldville to Caracas.

Dr. Noffsinger Reports

The unique virtue of a Peace Corps is its insistence on young people who live among the people wherever they go. As Congressman Henry Reuss, a Peace Corps advocate, noted, “After 45 it often gets harder to work up enthusiasm about living in an Arab house, sipping tea in an African grass hut or playing volley ball with Indian students . . . just this sort of neighborly living abroad is necessary if we want to get our ideas across to farmers and peasants.”

Perhaps two years’ living in a primitive village is too great a sacrifice to those who desire economic security and suburban tranquility. Perhaps we should just take our chances that the world situation will get better without such inconveniences.

President Kennedy doesn’t think so. Neither does Dr. Noffsinger, who submitted a report to help the new administration formulate this new program. Neither do the thousands of students who have expressed their enthusiasm for the Peace Corps. Neither, I would venture, do countless other Americans who know now that freedom and tyranny must be won and sustained in every generation, by every generation, preferably now by waging peace instead of war.

THE JUNIATA SPORTS PARADE

Indians Boast More Victories Than Defeats

VICTORIES exceeded losses on College Hill for the tenth straight year as the Indians showed 42 triumphs against 37 defeats in eight varsity sports during 1960.

Once again, Mike Snider’s cross-country team dominated the victory circle by completing another unbeaten season, winning eight straight, and stretching the all-winning mark to 26.

Winning ledgers also were recorded in football, baseball and golf and none of the varsity teams finished without at least one victory.

It was a rebuilding year in football, but Coach Ken Bunn’s Tribe came through with a 5-2 record. Baseball boasted a 7-6 mark and a trio of diamond stars who were signed to contracts in organized baseball. The Indian golfers rolled up a 9-2 record and finished second in both the Middle Atlantic Conference and NCAA Atlantic Coast Regional competition.

Coach Arnold Greene’s basketball team went down to its first losing season in seven years with a 6-13 campaign.

In other sports, track and field finished with a 3-4 mark, tennis with 3-6, including an upset of Pitt, and wrestling posted one victory against four losses.

Run to Win

NO QUESTION about it, the Indians’ well-conditioned cross-country team was running to “win ’em all” during the past season. And they sailed through eight straight dual engagements without a defeat to hike their unbeaten streak to 26. In five seasons, Juniata has lost only once.

Paced by Don Layman, the Somer-

Just like “unsung heroes” of the field of the play, the cheerleaders of Juniata carry out their assignment with vim, vigor and vitality each year. This smiling corps of coeds makes a valuable contribution to the campus activity. Left to right: Faith Marvill ’64, Oreland; Judy Frye ’62, Pottstown; Cindy Bowden ’62, Mt. Lakes, N. J.; Ann Weyant ’64, York; Janet Peters ’64, Erlton, N. J.; Joan Hively ’63, Williamsport; Louise Burkhart ’64, Carlisle; Jean Davies ’61, Plainfield, N. J., head cheerleader set senior who completed a brilliant career in the sport, the Indians competed in the NCAA college division championship at Wheaton, Ill. (finished 15th) and in the Middle Atlantic in Philadelphia (finished 9th).

Victories were scored over Gettysburg, Moravian, Elizabethtown, Dickinson, Delaware Valley, Indiana State, Franklin & Marshall and Albright. In the final meet, the Indians won 25-33 using reserves because the first six men were competing in the NCAA meet at Wheaton.

Six front-runners of the Tribe's unbeaten cross-country team finished 15th among the nation's best in the NCAA College Division championships Nov. 12. Kneeling: Charles Mack '62, New Florence; Don Layman '61, Somerset; Bob Berthold '63, Paterson, N. J.; standing: Galen Heckman '61, Smithsburg, Md.; Ned Smith '62, Willow Grove; Bill Chew '64, Auburn, N. J.

Point With Pride

EVEN WITH TWO losses in football, the Indians could look back at their ninth successive winning season. During that span Juniata has had five undefeated seasons out of the past eight for an impressive record of 55-4-2.

Coach Bunn lost heavily by graduation, including the famed Berrier twins, Bill and Jim, but managed to mold a team that upset Westminster 6-0 in the opener before dropping a 26-0 decision to Gettysburg. Then, the gridders rolled over Moravian, Western Maryland, Scranton and Drexel before colliding with unbeaten Albright.

Winning streaks, like other records, are made to be broken and Albright seems to be quite adept at doing the job. The Lions scalped the Indians in the season's finale 27-14 to end a College Field winning streak at 34.

Grid Talent Balanced

INDIVIDUAL HONORS were few and far between because of the balance of talent on the 1960 football squad, but John Pessy, senior center from Coraopolis, gained mention on the Williamson Little All-American.

Ron Poruban, a sophomore from Portage who shared the quarterback assignment and did most of the passing, led the Indians in total offense. The 5-7, 165-pounder completed 20 of 53 passes for 411 yards and added 97 rushing to net 508.

Leading scorer for the Tribe in 1960 was Ken Bechtel of Roaring Spring, junior quarterback, who recorded 33 points on three TDs and 15 out of 18 extra point placements.

Ground-gaining honors went to Harry Long, senior from Berwick, for the second year in a row with 376 yards.

Co-captains Orlando Falcione and Roy Martin led 11 seniors on the 1960 squad. Others were: Center John Pessy; Ends Dave Helsel and Jim Seacrist and Halfbacks Harry Long and Stan (Skip) Walasik from the starting team, plus reserves Emery DiDonato, Bob Melago, Pete Emrick and Earl Bumbaugh.

Winter Lull and 'Lumps'

UNFORTUNATELY, as anticipated, both the basketball and wrestling teams were taking their lumps as mid-season rolled around.

The Indians upset Upsala 80-77 in Memorial Gym January 10 to snap a seven-game losing streak on the court, but the wrestlers were seeking their first victory after four losses.

Hollidaysburg's Pat Frazier was leading the Tribe five in scoring after eight games with 111 points, including a sparkling 26-point spree against Upsala.

Reunion for "Miss Gracie"

A HAPPY BIRTHDAY celebration turned into a family reunion in Durham, N. C., when Grace Quinter Holsopple NE '88, B.S. '91, observed her 90th birthday last June 10.

The reunion was held at the home of her daughter, Naomi (Mrs. Donald K. Adams, Acad '13). "Miss Gracie," as she is affectionately known to her North Carolina friends, came through the several events of the weekend "remarkably fresh and unfatigued."

Mrs. Holsopple is a daughter of James Quinter, the first president of Juniata College. Her husband, Frank F. Holsopple NE '91, taught English at Juniata from 1901 to 1914. He died in Durham in 1946 at the age of 80.

Attending the happy occasion were the surviving children of Mrs. Holsopple: Mrs. Adams, Dr. Francis Q. H. Parsons '12, Herman L. Holsopple, Dayton, Ohio; and Mary Catherine Arick S '30, Washington, D. C. The oldest son, James Quinter Holsopple '20, died in 1956.

attended: John Cheney Arick, who is a student at the U. S. Naval Academy, and James Quinter Holsopple II '54.

Mrs. Adams wrote: "We all feel greatly blessed in that our mother retains her mental and physical alertness and health far beyond the usual conditions at 90."

In 1952, she was appointed chairman of the historical committee of the Washington City Church of the Brethren where Mr. Holsopple had been pastor from 1929 to 1934. Then, last October, she traveled alone by plane to turn over the results of the work to the Church Council. The history covered the 50-year period from 1891 to 1941.

Mrs. Holsopple's chief interests and recreation are "the political scene," the religion courses televised from the University of North Carolina, and her voluminous correspondence.

She has attended two major commencement observances at Juniata—her 50th in 1938 and 60th in 1948, and the Founders Day celebration in 1951.

The 70th anniversary of her "scientific" degree in 1891 will occur this June, 1961, and "Miss Gracie" hopes to attend.

Juniata's oldest alumnus, J. B. Boring, now living in Sebring, Florida, is still a firm believer in Santa Claus. These views on Santa came from Mr. Boring: "Maybe the youngsters don't see Santa. But neither do they see love nor hope, yet they exist. Just have faith in the good things in life and your existence will be a happy one. Santa Claus came into my life when I was a youngster. And he's been good to me, and he will be good to the children, if they continue to believe in him." Mr. Boring was seven months old when Santa visited him first and next May, Mr. Boring, Sebring's oldest resident, will be 101.
